The Reelers Trail forms part of the long distance Witton Weavers Way.

This walk covers a beautiful rural landscape where historical sites of industry, farming and religion combine to produce a fascinating trail.

You are strongly advised to use these walk details in conjunction with OS Explorer map No. 287, West Pennine Moors.

Stout shoes or boots plus waterproofs are recommended.

START: Livesey Library, Cherry Tree Lane, off Preston Old Road (A674)

PUBLIC TRANSPORT: 1/2 mile from Cherry Tree railway station. A frequent bus service operates along Preston Old Road

PARKING: Cherry Tree Lane

Alternative parking and start point (see OS map for exact location): Abbey Village, A675 Bolton Road

8-9

From Cherry Tree library take the path up to the Leeds and Liverpool canal.

Damselflies by the Leeds & Liverpool Canal

The canal (127 miles) is the longest single canal in Britain and took from 1770 to 1816 to complete. It was originally planned to pass through Whalley, following the Rivers Calder and Ribble. The economic draw however of the rapidly expanding cotton towns of East Lancashire was too great an opportunity for the merchants and builders to miss.

Turn right under the bridge along the towpath for 1 1/2 mile.

Whilst on the towpath you will cross the former Blackburn to Chorley railway line built 1866-9. There was a station at Feniscowles but the line fully closed in 1968.

You will also walk underneath Livesey Branch Road, a short turnpike road opening in 1810, linking Ewood to Feniscowles.

As you approach a mill tower for the Sun Paper Mill on the right go under the steel bridge, up the ramp and over the bridge.

There were two paper mills here; the Sun and the Star built during the 1870's. The Star was the first local firm to have electricity. Both mills turned rags into paper and had tramways to the canal to deliver the raw materials.

Proceed along the track up the field towards Stanworth Farm and the M65. As you approach the motorway climb the ladder stile over the stone wall on your left and continue down the field to the wood. At the bottom of the field turn right under the motorway and follow the wood boundary through two fields. At the corner of the second field climb the stile into Stanworth Wood. This woodland is part of the largest area of semi-ancient woodland in south Lancashire and is botanically very rich. Drop down into the wood along the track that appears on the left.

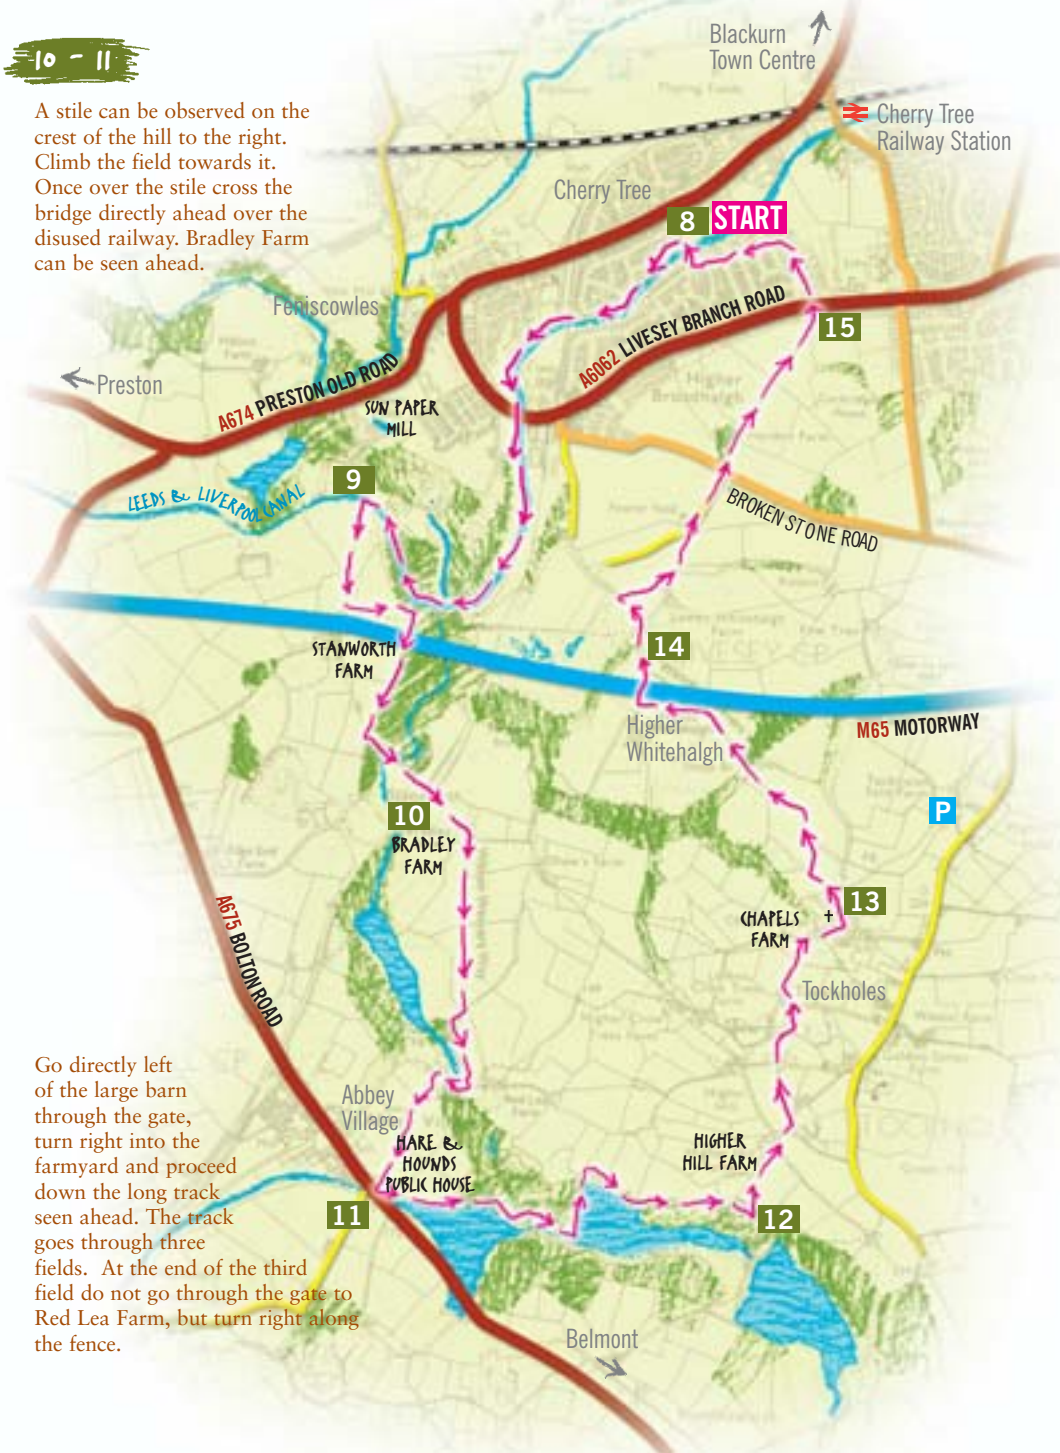

When you approach a clump of holly bushes, take an indistinct track that doubles back down to the right. (The holly bushes have grown over the original track). As you approach the River Roddlesworth take an indistinct path that drops down to the right. On reaching the river cross by the wooden footbridge.

couple of short steep ascents)

10 - 11

A stile can be observed on the crest of the hill to the right. Climb the field towards it. Once over the stile cross the bridge directly ahead over the disused railway. Bradley Farm can be seen ahead.

Go directly left of the large barn through the gate, turn right into the farmyard and proceed down the long track seen ahead. The track goes through three fields. At the end of the third field do not go through the gate to Red Lea Farm, but turn right along the fence.

Climb a stile and then a second stile on your left. Continue alongside the wood on your right. Drop down a grassy track just before the farm. Continue down the steps to cross the River Roddlesworth. Turn right when you reach the track, climbing it as it winds up the hill. Continue along the track to the car park of the Hare and Hounds Public House and turn immediately left along the track by the culvert.

Here you are skirting the southern end of Abbey Village. The name is thought to have arisen from a connection with Whalley Abbey. According to tradition there was a route to the Abbey from a secret passage at Brinscall Hall through the Roddlesworth area, (where a cross may still be seen on one of the farm buildings) to Whalley. The village was built at the time of the industrial revolution to serve a large cotton mill. The mill, now closed has been converted into small industrial units.

Follow the track for about 500 yards, climbing gradually. Just before a fork turn left up a path, through a kissing gate and into a field.

Climb the field, heading towards the right hand side of the 17th century Higher Hill Farm, seen ahead. Go through the stone stile, turn left and through another stile into the farm lane. As you pass the farm, take note of the garderobe on the outside of this grade II listed building. The small room jutting out on the first floor was once the height of fashion in hygienic toilets! You are now entering the picturesque stone-built village of Tockholes, with several large farmhouses dating from the 17th century. The Manor House, on the site of the now derelict Hollinshead hall is visited on the Tackler's Trail.

Tockholes is a popular starting point for walks - there is the Roddlesworth Visitor Centre next to the Royal Arms with plenty of parking. This is the start of the Roddlesworth nature trail and many of the walks to Darwen Tower begin from this point.

After leaving Higher Hill Farm continue up the lane, passing the old weavers' cottages and turning left at the junction.

At the crossroads at the bottom of the hill notice on the right hand corner the old parish pound or pinfold, where stray animals were impounded until reclaimed. On the opposite corner is an old graveyard.

In 1803 a breakaway group from the Congregational Chapel built the Bethesda Chapel on this site. In 1899 the stones from the decaying chapel were used to build a new Sunday school, it now serves as the Village Hall. Victoria Terrace, the row of cottages on the opposite right-hand corner (once called Bethesda Row), were handloom weavers' cottages Continue ahead down the lane, bearing right and keeping to the made road, following it round past the United Reformed Chapel.

Tockholes was a stronghold of Nonconformity in the time of Charles II and this chapel was known as the Mother of Nonconformity as one of the first established in the area in 1662.

The route takes you along Rake Brook Reservoir. As you approach the house go down

Continue along the road past the memorial Lych Gate, erected in 1920 to honour villagers who gave their lives in the First World War. Walk past Lodge Farm (a splendid example of a farmhouse with combined shippin) then onto the renovated Chapels Barn

Over the wall past the barn can be seen Chapels Farm, another listed 17th century farmhouse.

A few yards further along on the left is the Church of St Stephen, with a Lych Gate erected in honour of a former Mayor of Blackburn.

The Toches Stone 684 ad

On the top of the main path to the church on the left is the Toches Stone, supposedly a remnant of the old Parish Preaching Cross dating from 684, from which the parish takes its name. Behind the church is the spindle-shaped grave of John Osbaldeston, the inventor of the Weft Fork.

Continue walking up Chapels Lane and turn left onto the unmade road, which runs along the top side of the church.

13 - 14

As you approach several large modern houses follow the 'stepping stones' in the grass verge on your right and climb the stile. Follow the left-hand fence line to the corner of the field, cross the ditch on a small wooden bridge and climb the stile. Continue down the edge of the field over another stile and halfway down the next field climb a stile between a gate and a twisted old oak tree.

Follow the hedge line down to the wood. At the bottom of this field climb the stile into the wood and cross the footbridge over Sheep Bridge Brook. In this area there is evidence that a clash took place here during the Civil War, with the remains of 40 horses and various relics having been unearthed.

On emerging from the wood go straight ahead through the field keeping the wall on your left. Climb the ladder stile alongside the motorway and follow the path until it emerges onto Stockclough Lane near Higher Whitehalgh Farm.

14 - 15

Turn right onto the lane and under the M65. After about 400 yards turn second right towards Lower Whitehalgh Farmhouse. Do not go into the farmyard but veer left through the gate following the track along the wall. Leave the track when it veers to the right, and head for a stile in the wall to the right of the farmhouse seen ahead. Continue along the track ahead. On a clear day Black Combe in Cumbria can be seen to your left. Cross Brokenstone Road, climb the stile and continue ahead, keeping to the fence on your left passing Horden Farm. Climb the stile and continue down the track to Livesey Branch Road.

Turn left along Livesey Branch Road, then right down Pinewood. Stay with the road as it curves round. Then just past Burford Close go through the railings down the narrow lane to the right. Cross the canal returning to the library.

Good tucker! Well deserved at the end of the day
